Glossary

Abbey Ale – Belgian family of strong fruity beers either produced or inspired by monastery brewers.

Alt, Altbier – German style of beer, similar to British bitter or pale ale, especially associated with Düsseldorf.

Blonde – A mainly French and Belgian term for golden beer

Craft Brewer – A term referring to breweries opened since the late 1970s that produce specialist beers.

Dubbel – A Belgian Abbey ale, stronger than a pilsner, usually dark in colour

Dunkel – Dunkel means ‘dark’ in Germany. Most readily used for dark lagers but can be also applied for dark wheat beers.

Gueuze – A blend of young and old lambic beers blended together to create a sparkling, refreshing beer.

Hefeweizen – German term for wheat beer with sediment.

Kölsch – Light style of top fermenting golden beer first brewed around the city of Cologne (Köln)

Lambic – Beers fermented using wild yeasts

Rauchbier – A German style of lager that has been smoked over beechwood fires. Smoky in taste.

Sour ales, beers – Originating in Flanders, these beer undergo aging for 18 months – 2 years creating a thirst-quenching acetic character.

Triple, Tripel, Trippel – Traditionally the strongest of Belgian abbey ales, although there are now quadruple beers that exceed them in strength.

Wheat beer – Beer containing high levels of malted wheat, usually cloudy but can also be clear.

Wit, Witbier – Means white beer in Belgian, wheat beer

OKTOBERFEST

28th September – 2nd November 2013

Schneider Weizen Hell 5.2%

Schneider Blonde Weisse (renamed from Weizen Hell) has a light honey-colouring and a clove-like aroma. On the tongue it is clean and smoothly balanced and finishes sparkling with a light and fine bitterness.

Schneider Hopfenweisse

This is a new wheat beer style drink, described by the brewery as “hoppy fireworks”. Golden but slightly reddish in colour, its a strong wheat Doppelbock. The intense floral aroma reminds you of tropical fruits and relieves the powerful bitterness. An extreme wheat beer that shows how far wheat beer taste can go.
